

Jewish Genealogical Society of Greater Boston

presents

Advanced Googling for Genealogists

Michael Marx

Sunday, January 6, 2008
1:30–4:30 PM
Temple Emanuel, Newton Centre

Learn how to take your genealogy research to a new level by making your Google searches more successful. Google is a simple and helpful way to search the internet, but are you getting just what you want or need? When you get a promising looking return, do you know how to get the most out of it? Did you know there are many more very useful things Google can do beyond that simple search screen? These and many more questions will be answered at the program.

Marx has been researching his German roots since 2001 and can now trace his ancestors back to the mid- 1600s. Much of his success has come from searching the World Wide Web, and his primary tool has been Google. He is the treasurer of the JGSGB.

Temple Emanuel is at 385 Ward St., Newton Centre. For maps and detailed directions, visit our web page at <http://emanuel.jgs.gb.org>.

Admission is free for members, $5 for non-members.
Refreshments will be served.

Upcoming programs:

Feb. 3 "Problem Solving with Experts in Jewish Genealogy"

Mar. 16 Film (at Needham Library)

The Jewish Genealogical Society of Greater Boston is a nonprofit organization of individuals interested in genealogical research. It conducts monthly educational programs.
