“Jewish Boston: Where Once We Walked”

Norman Morris

Sunday, June 1, 2003

1:30–4:30 PM

Temple Reyim, West Newton

Boston native Norm Morris will describe the Jewish Boston of his youth and early adult years. He has recently written two books about the former Jewish neighborhoods of Dorchester, Roxbury, and Mattapan. In Ghetto Memories, Norm depicted in text and photographs the vibrant life from the 1930s until the flight to the suburbs in the 1960s. The ‘prequel’, Ghetto Memories Revisited, begins with immigration and development of the area in the early 1900s and ends with “what it is like today.”

Norm Morris was President of NMA, Inc., an international audit and consulting firm; a commissioned Examiner for the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston; and a faculty member at Northeastern University and the Banking School at the University of Wisconsin at Madison. He holds an undergraduate degree in finance with a graduate degree in economics from Brown University and is a graduate of the MIT Sloan School. Prior to his military service during the Korean War, Mr. Morris was a professional baseball player.

Temple Reyim, 1860 Washington Street (Route 16), Newton, is near Newton-Wellesley Hospital and the Woodland stop on the Riverside Green Line, as well as a short ride from Route 128 at Exit 21.
